

God will refurbish the earth. But when God judges those works by fire at the great white throne judgment (Revelation 20:11) it is people He will judge and those people not found in the book of life—i.e. not saved—will be cast into the lake of fire” (Revelation 20:13–15).

Now looking at Revelation 6:14: “And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places [emphasis added].”

It cannot mean the destruction of the starry heavens either. From the second part, it could signify the refurbishment of the atmospheric heavens because it seems to indicate from “every mountain and island were moved” that the earth’s surface is reworked. This argument is strengthened by Revelation 21:1 itself which concludes with “there was no more sea”. So if this has a literal fulfilment it must occur with the refurbishment of the earth surface, thus the earth survives but the surface is remade. Then why not “heaven” also, meaning the atmospheric heaven around the earth?

The preceding verse Revelation 6:13:

“And the stars of heaven fell to the earth, even as a fig tree casts her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind [emphasis added].”

The stars of heaven cannot literally fall to the earth. Under the historical interpretation of biblical prophecy Revelation 6:13 is interpreted to mean the dethroning of earthly rulers. It is symbolic language. Therefore, these verses probably have no literal fulfilment.

Similarly with Isaiah 34:4:

“And all the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll: and all their host shall fall down, as the leaf falls off from the vine, and as a falling fig from the fig tree [emphasis added].”

(Note Revelation 6:13–14 is a reference to Isaiah 34:4.)

Chapter 34 of Isaiah describes God’s judgments on the wicked. If verse 3, “the mountains shall be melted with their blood”, cannot be literal, then why assume that the following “And all the host of heaven shall be dissolved ...” (verse 4) to be literal?

Of Isaiah 34:4, John Gill¹ wrote:

“And all the hosts of heaven shall be dissolved. ‘Pine away’, as with sickness, grow languid, become obscure, lose their light, and be turned into blood and darkness; this figure is used to express the horror of this calamity, as if the very heavens themselves, and the sun, and moon, and stars, were affected with it; see (Isaiah 13:10) and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll; a book, or volume, which when rolled up, one letter of it could not be read; and it was the manner formerly of making and writing books in the form of a roll; hence the word volume; and here it signifies that there should be such a change in the heavens, as that not a star should be seen, much less the sun or moon; and may signify the utter removal and abolition of all dignities and offices, supreme and subordinate, civil and ecclesiastical, in the whole Roman jurisdiction; thus the destruction of Rome Pagan is described in (Revelation 6:14) ... from whence the language seems to be borrowed: and all their host shall fall down, as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling fig from the fig tree; that is, the stars should fall down: by whom may be meant persons in office, that made a considerable figure; who shall fall from their stations, in which they shone with much splendour and grandeur, as leaves fall from trees in autumn, particularly the vine; or as unripe and rotten figs fall from the fig tree when shaken by a violent wind; the same metaphor is used in (Revelation 6:13) [underlined emphasis added].”

On the following verse, Isaiah 34:5, John Gill wrote:

“For my sword shall be bathed in heaven ... That is, the sword of the Lord, as it is called in the next verse (Isaiah 34:6), and it is he that is speaking; it designs the vengeance of the Lord, the punishment he will inflict on the wicked, said to be ‘bathed in heaven’, because determined and prepared there; the allusion may be to the bathing of swords in some sort of liquor, to harden or brighten them, and so fit them for use. Kimchi renders it, ‘my sword’ which is ‘in heaven shall be bathed’, that is, in the blood of the slain; ‘heaven’ may denote ... the whole Roman Pagan empire in (Revelation 12:7) and may design the principal men in it, those that are in the highest places and offices, in whom the sword of the Lord shall be first drenched, and be as it were satiated and inebriated with the blood of them”

John Gill understood this verse as a metaphorical description of the removal of those in power; nothing to do with a literal heaven and stars falling or dissolving.

Therefore 2 Peter 3:10–13, Revelation 6:14 and Isaiah 34:4 cannot be used to straightjacket a literal interpretation on the destruction of the whole starry universe, and thus it follows one does not interpret the Hebrew word עולם (’owlam) in Psalms 148:6 and 89:37, translated ‘forever’, as not meaning ‘eternal’ because of a prior commitment to a certain eschatology.

John G. Hartnett
 bible-science-forum.com
 Australia

References

1. John Gill’s Exposition on the Entire Bible, www.biblestudytools.com/commentaries/gills-exposition-of-the-bible/.